Memorial

To the Honorable O'Blair Kent, President Judge of the Courts of Crawford County, and the Members of the Crawford County Bar:

Your Committee appointed to prepare a minute or memorial to the memory of our late Brother, Captain James W. Smith, respectfully submits the following:-

James W. Smith was born in Wilson County Tennessee, on the 5th day of January, 1840. He had five brothers, William Daniel, Charles C. Levi D., Dion B., and one sister, Mary E. His parents were Jacob Smith and Mary Compton Smith, southern planters. His early years were spent on the plantation of his parents, who died while he was still a young boy. Thereafter, he made his home with an uncle until he started out in the world upon his own Career.

Sometime in the 1850's Joseph W. Pickett and his brother, Byrus, both graduates of Allegheny College, established an academy at Taylorsville, Tennessee, near Lebanon, the seat of old Cumberland College. James W. Smith, and his brother Dion B. Smith, attended this academy and later entered Allegheny College. Captain Smith graduated therefrom in 1860.

His quiet ways, studious habits, strict integrity and high ideals at once won for him an enviable place in the hearts of his fellow students and his professors predicted for him an illustrious career. He was initiated into the mysteries of Phi Kappa Psi in 1858, six years after the Chapter had been founded. At that time there were no chapter houses. The meetings were held at regular intervals in a private room on the third floor of a Meadville hotel.

In Memoriam

James W. Smith, Esq. of the Crawford County Bar.

Along with his close application to study he always found time for college activities, whether social, athletic, literary or religious.

James W. Smith was admitted to the Crawford County Bar April 9, 1862. His preceptors were D. A. Finney and Joshua Douglass. The petition for his admission states that he was admitted to practice law in the State of Ohio, and the rules requiring one years residence in this State before admission, were suspended. His professional career was interrupted at this point by the Civil War.

From time to time after his graduation from college he returned to his old home at Alexandria, Wilson County, Tennessee. His father was a slave holder, and Captain Smith before attaing his majority, inherited a number of slaves from his father. These slaves were rented out to plantation owners by his guardian but imediately upon becoming of age all his slaves were manumitted. Here is an act which gives us a peak at the inner workings of his mind. An act against his own interest. An act of humanity. At that early age he was a sound Christian thinker, who believed in the divine doctrine that all men are created equal.

Neither heritage, nor personal interest, nor the Sunny South with all her intoxicating customs and environment, was able to check his call to duty. He had studied the question of slavery and determined in his own mind it was wrong and contrary to the teachings of a just God. When his opinion was once formed, he obeyed the call to duty.

Raised in the South where slavery flourished, naturally he had many friends and relatives who were sympatic with the Southern cause, yet our Brother wavered not in his belief. During the few months he remained on the old homestead, after his college graduation, his demeanor and shy utterances, on the slavery question, created suspicion in the minds of his Southern friends, and it is reported that on account of his Northern sympathies, he was chased by a Confederate gang to Nashville, where he boarded a train for the North, determined to join the Union Army.

Returning to Allegheny College he found a ready call for his services. His brother Sion B. Smith, who was graduated in 1861, went out with a College company as First Lieutenant, later was promoted to the rank of Major, and shortly thereafter he contracted typhoid fever while in camp at Chickahominy and died August 4, 1862. Archie Norris, one of the other four boys who went from the Tennessee Academy to Allegheny, entered the Confederate Army as a Lieutenant, became a Captain, was captured at 1863, and sent to Put-in-Bay, Lake Erie, where he remained till the latter part of the war.

The other two boys, J. Wilson Phillips and James W. Smith, with the assistance of David T. McKay, organized a company of cavalry, which was mustered into service November 26, 1862, as Co. B, 18th Cavalry, 163 Pennsylvania Regiment, made up mostly of boys from Philadelphia and the Western counties of Pennsylvania. J. Wilson Phillips was commissioned Captain, and was made Major April 8, 1864. He was wounded at Gettysburg, July 3, 1863, but recovered and served till the close of the war. David T. McKay was commissioned First Lieutenant. He was made a prisoner at Culpeper Court House September 13, 1863, and was in Libby Prison until March 1, 1865. James W. Smith was commissioned Second Lieutenant, promoted to First Lieutenant April 26, 1864, and to Captain December 2, 1864.

On January 1, 1863, Captain Smith's Regiment was sent to Virginia to do picket duty along the line covering the defense of Washington, on the Virginia Shore, the stamping ground of Col. John Singleton Mosby. For disregard of the rules of Warfare, General Sherman caused to be shot seven of Mosby's troopers without trial, and Mosby in retaliation handed seven of Custers cavalrymen, boys who had been comrades in arms of Captain Smith.

On June 25, 1863, the 163d, under General Kilpatrick, was sent to Middletown, to watch the movements of the Confederates, who were then undertaking a northern invasion. At this point Captain Smith and his comrades became a part of the Third Cavalry Corps of the Army of the Potomac. He did valiant service in the three days battle of Gettysburg, where he had a narrow escape from death. A bullet passed through his army coat, tore off part of his vest pocket, but did not graze his tunic or undershirt. Captain Smith's account of this engagement as reported in The Shield of Phi Kappa Psi in the May issue of 1935, is as follows:

"The 18th was acting as a rear guard, he explained, 'and as we were passing through Hanover we were unexpectedly attacked by the head of Stuart's Cavalry. Our boys were considerably disorganized, and we were driven through the town. But it didn't take us long to rally. Our colonel, hearing heavy gun-fire to the rear, dispatched the Fifth New York boys to the scene of activity, and with their aid, we drove the Confederates back to the cover of their artillery. Fighting kept up at a good rate all day, and it was pretty hot, but we kept Stuart just where we wanted him.' Leaving Hanover, he related, we went through Abbottstown and New Oxford, and advanced to the rear of the Confederates left wing. Custers Brigade repulsed a fierce charge of the Confederate cavalry. That was July 2d, the second day of the battle. That night we moved by the rear of the Union Lines to the extreme left of the field beyond Round Top, and struck the Confederates right wing a severe blow early the following morning.

On July 4th we moved toward Maryland, passed through Emmettsburg, and struck Ewell's wagon train at midnight near Monterey Springs, as it was crossing South Mountain. We captured two pieces of artillery, 200 wagons and about 1000 prisoners, including many poor fellows who were wounded at Gettysburg."

Captain Smith had the utmost respect for the Southern soldier. Many were his friends and comrades who fought in the Confederate army. He believed in the Union cause; they believed in the Confederate cause; he conceded their unqualified right to their opinions, but held they were erroneous, founded upon a false premise, and contrary to the principles of justice and equality among men as ordained by God.

Toward the close of 1864 his regiment was engaged mostly on picket duty in Virginia. Here he had time to reflect and think of peace, home and family. He was in love with a young woman in Meadville. He could not content himself with the dull service following the excitement of the great battles. Finally he revealed to his superiors that he would like to go home to be married. His health was somewhat impaired, and finally on February 25, 1865, his resignation was accepted.

He had been granted a furlough in November, 1864. On his homeward trip an incident of note occurred. While his train was stopped in the railroad yards at Cincinnati, a train carrying Confederate prisoners from Put-in-Bay, passing in the opposite direction, stopped alongside the train on which Captain Smith was riding. On the car directly opposite Captain Smith sat Captain Archie Norris, his boyhood playmate, his college chum, his fraternity brother, who had opposed him in the bitter struggle at Gettysburg. They raised the windows and exchanged greetings, and a moment later their trains moved onward, one carrying Captain Norris back to the sunny Southland, and the other carrying Captain Smith North to his future bride and home. Thanksgiving day Captain Smith was married to Anna Elmina Salisbury, at Meadville, Pa. She was of English ancestry and a woman of great musical and literary talent. She had been a Congregationalist while Captain Smith had been raised a Baptist. There was no Congregational Church in Meadville at that time, and certain rules of the Baptist Church made it difficult for Mrs. Smith to become a member of that church. Hence both became members of the Presbyterian Church. During their entire married life, until the death of Mrs. Smith each Sunday morning, except in sickness, saw Captain Smith and Mrs. Smith occupying their regular pew well toward the front. They were likewise regular attendants at Sunday School. Mrs. Smith for a quarter of a century was organist and director of music in the Meadville Second Presbyterian Church while Captain Smith served his church as elder. Here was a union of two great souls, devout Christians in thought and deed.

Captain Smith was no idle dreamer. His every act was the result of careful thought. While outwardly quiet, slow and deliberate, his progress was rapid. His mental training, keen observation, and war experience, taught him to act quickly, as well as carefully.

The terrible conflict was ended. He had assumed a new relation to state and society, and at once he began preparation for the service he was to render in the future.

For about one year after his marriage, he and Mrs. Smith occupied a small house on the northeast corner of North and North Main Streets, in the City of Meadville. The small house occupied by them still stands at the rear of the lot, having been moved back to make way for the service station now occupying the original site.

These were days of reconstruction. For Captain Smith and Mrs. Smith they were days of construction. He at once set about acquiring a permanent home. A lot was secured and a house erected on the east side of North Main Street (now No. 677 North Main Street). He moved into this house in the spring of 1866, where he continued to live until the date of his death.

In this quiet peaceful home and to the union of these two Christian people were born three children, two sons and a daughter. Dion B. Smith, the first child, and namesake of his uncle, who died in the war, was born in December, 1865. He in many ways has followed in the footsteps of his illustrious father. He graduated at Allegheny College, took up the study of law, was admitted to practice in the several Courts of the State, and for many years he has been engaged in active practice in the Courts of Allegheny County. He possesses in a marked degree the sterling qualities and fine character possessed by his father. Here is a beautiful example of character building, the influence of a Christian home and environment upon the growing youth.

Another son died in infancy. A daughter, Victorine, was born in 1873. A virulent epidemic of diphtheria spread over the northeast section of the City of Meadville, taking the lives of many children, among them Victorine, the cherished daughter of the Smith family. This was a severe blow to the home, but severe as it was, it could not dent the Christian faith of Captain Smith. If anything, it made him a more devout believer. The enlarged picture of this beautiful child hangs on the wall of the old home and many a heart has been touched by Captain Smith's beautiful reference to this child, as he would point to the picture on the wall, while his face would light up with a peaceful yet somewhat sombre and melancholy smile.

After his return from the war, he was actively engaged in the practice of law in the City of Meadville. In 1869, he was elected District Attorney of Crawford County, which office he filled with with credit to himself and his profession. He served as City and County Solicitor. He possessed a keen and analytical mind. He was well grounded in the principles of the common law, often saying that law was the application of common honesty to changing conditions of civilization. He was a man of few words, yet his accomplishments were many. Seldom raising his voice above his ordinary tone of speech yet few failed to hear him. He commanded attention when he arose to speak. Judges and Justices alike respected his opinions. In later years he rarely appeared before juries, but it is stated that in his early years his address to the jury, as well as to the court, was very effective. His candor, frankness and open sincerity carried conviction. He was an aid to the court, and a friend to every member of the bar. Many a lawyer can point to some kind act or wise counsel of Captain Smith that has had a lasting effect upon his career as a lawyer or in the business world. His personality commanded the highest respect. Members of the profession looked upon him more as a sage than the ordinary practitioner. He adorned the profession he loved so well. His raiment was untarnished. He was the personification of justice herself.

He was not a politician, although he took an active interest in all matters of church and state. A Republican in party affiliation. Party to him was not a chain, but rather a badge or insignia. With him principal was always above party.

He was never robust. In fact it was predicted shortly after the war that he would not live long. People marveled at his ability to withstand the rigors of war. But his life was clean, his habits good, his thoughts pure, and who can measure the length of such a life?

He was a Christian gentleman in the fullest sense of the term. No one ever heard fall from his lips any word that might not have been uttered freely in the presence of his spiritual advisor. Christianity did not mean for him limitation or renunciation, but rather a wider opportunity and a greater power to serve. It did not mean to him subtraction, but addition. He capitalized the good things of each day. It seems to us his life was moulded after the thought expressed in Goethe's verse:

"What each day needs that shalt thou ask
Each day will set its proper task;
Give others work just share of praise,
Not of thine own the merits raise—
Bewdre no fellow man thou hate;
And thus in Gods hands leave thy fate."

His body was kept clean, his mind open and alert. He had found himself early in life, by that we mean he had recognized his relations to the rest of the universe. He was a student of the Bible, the Book of Books, which reveals man unto himself and his true relation to God. He believed that life, itself, though intangible, invisible and indescribable, was a privilege granted, or blessing bestowed by Divine Providence for our enjoyment and use. He looked upon it as a trust to be used in beautifying and strengthening our physical or spiritual being to the end that we might better serve our fellowman and our God. Life to him meant service, and every person who came in contact with him can testify as to his readiness to serve regardless of the cost to himself. Real service to him must be coupled with charity, and charity in its true meaning meant love - love of country, love of his fellowman, and love of his God. His conduct was not measured in the privacy of his own closet by the standards of expediency, but rather by that higher standard set for us in the Heavens and revealed by the teachings of the Book of Books of which he was so fond. His life was full and rich. It had length breadth and height. He stood four square to the whole world and in his quiet, inimitable way was ready to maintain his rights in the bussiness affairs of church and state.

He was without our foremost citizen. He bore a great resemblance to Abraham Lincoln, our beloved President. For more than half a century in sunshine and rain, this venerated citizen was seen wending his way up and down North Main Street to and from his office. Everybody knew that familiar figure. Even the children spoke of him as "Abe." He loved little children.

He was of a retiring, shy, bashful nature. He always wore a peaceful smile; his eyes had a melancholy look; his voice was soft and sweet; his manner was kind and gentle, all outward signs of the warmth of a pure soul.

He lived to see the great change in transportation, from the ox-cart to the automobile; development of the aeroplane; invention and use of the telephone and telegraph; the mysteries of the electric current; moving pictures; improved highways; the great changes in economical, educational, industrial, social and religious problems. He marveled at these inventions and discoveries. He kept abreast of all and at all times familiar with the changing law and court decisions effected to meet the new conditions. With it all he was the same Captain Smith. His character was secure by reason of the many long years of close and careful observance of the principles of right and justice as revealed to him by his Creator.

His beloved wife passed away on the 24th day of December, 1928. This was the greatest shock of his life, but his sublime faith enabled him to still carry on. All of the adversities of his long life, the terrors of war, the loss of his dear ones, tended only to accentuate the melancholy music of his voice, the broad peaceful smile and the friendly look in his kind eyes

Captain James W. Smith is no more. He answered the final summons on the evening of March 9, 1936, having lived 96 years, 2 months and 4 days. Yes, he is dead. In passing, he has left a void no other can fill. He was a kind father, loving husband, a brave soldier, a profound lawyer, a patriotic citizen, and a true friend. The Court and Bar will miss his familiar voice and wise counsel. The community will miss his steadying influence. The church will miss him in her councils. The host of friends and acquaintances will feel the loss of his inspiring example.

Yet how little there is of good that can die. As Webster says: "If it be true that no one can safely be pronounced happy while he lives, if that event which terminates life can alone crown its honors and its glory, what felicity is here. xxx If we had power we could not wish to reverse this dispensation of Divine Providence. The great objects of life were accomplished, the drama was ready to close."

To his country he yet lives. He lives in everything that perpetuates the remembrance of man on earth. He lives in his example. Death has not surprised us by an untimely blow. We have indeed seen the tomb close, but it has closed over mature years, over the long and faithful service, over the weakness of age; and only after the ends of life had been fulfilled.

"When worlds are o'er
And time has passed away,
Cold in the grave the mortal heart may lie.
But that which warmed it once,
Will never die."

Often we marveled at his exceptional powers. While he had been confined to his home for some time, yet we just did not think Captain Smith could die. We clung to him as he himself clung to life. His life seemed charmed. It seemed as though here he had already begun to live the eternal life, and the short transition was but a renewal of that broader and fuller life.

The charm and halo which Divine Providence had woven about the evening of his life must sometime be broken. We watch the sun sink beneath the western hills, and cast his ray of glory over the western horizon, so the passing away of our Brother reflects over our community and lives all the influence of his many virtues.

The words of Julia Ward Howe to her minister shortly before her death seem appropriate to our departed Brother. She said:

"The lower I drain the cup of life, the sweeter it grows. All the sugar is at the bottom."

Likewise her verse expressing the same thought:

"I have made a voyage upon a golden river,
'Neath clouds of opal and amethist
Along its banks bright shapes were moving ever
And threatening shadows melted into mist.'
My journey nears its close;
In some still haven
My bark shall find its anchorage
Of rest,
When the kind Hand, which every good has given,
Opening with wider grace,
Shall give the best."
